From the Pastor's Desk

Peace and all God's blessings.

Jesus saw the Kingdom of heaven, as there to be entered. But what did he mean by Kingdom of heaven? That is not so easy to answer. One way of pinning it down could be this. It is a way of living: of being alive, of being ourselves, of interacting with others and with the created world, a way of living that would be personally satisfying and totally fulfilling.

In fact, we are loved by God. But that has always been so. It needs more. We need to recognize that God loves us, and to live and act in accordance with this joy-inspiring truth! We need to remain in the faith of Christ and trust in the God who is love. [We probably all think that we do that already, but I am not so sure. We don't always sit easily with God's totally unconditional love, either for ourselves or for others.] A consequence of being totally loved by God is that we all have an amazing dignity, independently of whether we realize it or not, or whether we live up to it or not.

We begin to enter the Kingdom of heaven as we recognize our dignity, and, at the same time, the equal dignity of every human person, and seek to interact accordingly. That interacting consists in learning to see each other as in fact we are loved by God, sharing the life of God (and, in that sense, children of God, brothers and sisters of each other); and to respect ourselves and to respect all others as well.

Jesus saw that the way proposed by the scribes and Pharisees did not measure up to life in the Kingdom: If your virtue goes no deeper than that of the scribes and Pharisees, you will never get into the Kingdom of heaven. What was the way of living proposed by the scribes and Pharisees? It wasn't peculiar to them. We are all very familiar with it.

These teachings of Jesus in the Sermon on the Mount should be shaping our lives each day, willingly embraced as the embodiment of God's will and the path into God's Kingdom. We are all challenged by the words of Sirach, in the first reading at Mass this Sunday: "If you choose, you can keep the commandments of God; it is loyalty to God's will."

The examples that Jesus lists in today's Reading are all clearly based on the need for a personalized recognition of others' God-given dignity, and what flows from that: the destructiveness even of spontaneous hostility, the dignity of women and the wonder of married love, the importance of trust as the basis for community, and, following from that, the need for truthfulness.

Jesus came to set us free. For blind obedience, he substituted insight into the real; for law, he substituted virtue; and for obligation imposed from outside, he substituted the inner call of an enlightened conscience.

Pax et Bonum.
Fr. James Phan, OFM Conv.

February 2026 M. I. Intention: O Immaculata, please intercede... That the commitment to daily conversion may make us witnesses of the Gospel to those who are indifferent or remain distant.

St. Maximilian Quote:

"It is only through grace that we can come closer to God. In the supernatural order, therefore, heresy in one form or another is but a departure from graces... A remedy to that lies in regaining grace, thereby getting closer once again to the Immaculata." (KW 597)
